Thrivers ...
In Their Own Words

WHY ME?

Life’s LESSONS can be hard. The loss of your parents in the proper order of things is expected. The loss of a younger brother and your own child is not expected. A cancer diagnosis is not expected.

I chose at a young age to be a doctor. I wanted to help people. The goal was formidable, but achievable with encouragement from family and friends. I chose the new field of medical oncology. I was driven to be my best. Along the way I grew to appreciate the need to advocate for the patients to overcome the hurdles of achieving the best care no matter what the “cost” in money or time.

My wife with newly diagnosed breast cancer wanted me to be her oncologist in 1994. She has remained my greatest advocate. Nine years later I was diagnosed with bladder cancer. Initial treatment didn’t work, and I underwent radical surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital. I thankfully, could resume the practice of medicine shortly thereafter.

After 38 years of being an oncologist I retired in 2017 and passed the baton to our son, Tracy. There cannot be prouder parents.

WHY ME?

WHY NOT ME?

- Peter DeGreen, MD

I AM A THRIVER

The blessing of being a cancer survivor is one that I almost immediately recognized. In a TV interview promoting a breast cancer program I remember stating, “I’m actually glad I had cancer.” Had I not traveled my “Healing Journey”, I would not have experienced and appreciated some of my most tender moments. The gratitude for the life I was given has grown exponentially. Getting to know and understand fellow cancer survivors has been a privilege. The opportunity to “give back” has given me a sense of purpose. God in His wisdom knew choosing to make me a survivor actually made me a “Thrivers”.

Thank you for your cooperation with us in helping to keep our patients and our staff healthy by wearing masks, being screened before entering, and practicing social distancing. We’ll continue to keep these practices into effect for everyone’s safety.

Tips for Staying Healthy While Staying at Home

While the country has been told to stay at home as much as possible to slow the spread of the coronavirus, it's especially important for those with cancer to maintain a healthy lifestyle.

Here are healthy tips to help you stay on track:

- Take walks outside and keep a social distance of 6 feet from others. Keep your heart rate up.
- If indoors, walk up and down your stairs or play music and dance. If your space is limited, try jumping jacks or walking and/or running in place.
- Seek shade: Limit your direct exposure to the sun, especially between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., when UV rays are strongest.
- Avoid tanning beds and sunlamps: Both can cause serious long-term skin damage and contribute to skin cancer.
- Soup cans make great weights for arm curls, bend at your elbows to curl your hand to your shoulder. Complete 10 to 12 reps.
- Cleaning your home, outside chores, and playing with pets are also good options for physical activity. Try doing squats while doing either, bend with your knees and keep your back straight.
- There are also a variety of exercise programs available online or on TV that you can participate.
- Maintain a healthy diet of fruits, vegetables, and whole grains. Limit eating processed meats, less red meat, and less sweets and alcohol.
- Stay connected with family and friends by phone or email. Zoom and FaceTime are app to also help you communicate and see your loved ones.
